Baccio Bandinelli?s association with the Medici court was marked by several key commissions, most notably his participation in the construction and decoration of Medici architectural projects. His appointment as a court sculptor provided him with opportunities to produce works intended to showcase Medici power and divine right.

Among his most significant commissions was the statue of Hercules and Cacus (1534), designed for the Piazza della Signoria, intended to complement the existing sculptures by Michelangelo and other masters. Critics have pointed out that the work?s muscular figures and dramatic poses reflect classical inspiration but suffer from imbalance and awkward proportions. Art historian Harold Osborne remarked that the sculpture "exudes a theatricality that borders on the grotesque," illustrating the contentious reception of Bandinelli?s style.

Despite this, the sculpture served its purpose as a political statement, emphasizing strength and heroism aligned with Medici authority.
